TRAUMA EXPERIENCED BY WOMEN WHO MADE SUBMISSIONS AT THE TRUTH AND RECONCILIATION COMMISSION HEARINGS

by

NONTUTHUZELO CAROLINE NOMOYI

Presented in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the degree

DOCTOR PHILOSOPHIAE

in the

Faculty of Arts

UNIVERSITY OF PRETORIA

January 2000
Dedicated to:

My husband, Ben Nomoyi
I would like to express my gratitude to the following persons for the support and assistance they provided during this study:

- Professor Ronelle Pretorius, my supervisor, for her efficient guidance, relentless enthusiasm, interest and encouragement.

- I am thankful to my husband, Ben for his sacrifice, support and understanding throughout.

- My children, Vuyiswa, Luyanda, Bulumko and Luvuyo for their sacrifice, understanding and support throughout.

- Mrs Estelle van Heerden for her interest, assistance with the typing of this manuscript, as well as the graphical representation of the data.

- Mrs. Mauer for her help with the statistical analysis.

- The 30 respondents who made this study possible.

DEO GLORIA
CONTENTS

| TABLES | vii |
| FIGURES | viii |
| SUMMARY | ix |
| OPSOMMING | xii |

CHAPTER 1: GENERAL ORIENTATION AND THEORETICAL PERSPECTIVE

1.1 ORIENTATION................................................................. 1

1.2 STATEMENT OF THE PROBLEM.
1.2.1 Relevance of the topic to society............................. 11
1.2.2 Development of Commissions focusing on human rights abuses 14
1.2.2.1 Characteristics of TRCs........................................... 15

1.3 THEORETICAL SIGNIFICANCE OF THE STUDY...................... 19
1.3.1 Parsons' Theory.......................................................... 20
1.3.2 Janoff-Bulman and Frieze's Victim Experience Model........ 21
1.3.3 Stroebe and Stroebe's Theory of Bereavement................. 21
1.3.4 Frankl's Existential Theory......................................... 22
1.3.5 Maslow's Motivational Theory..................................... 22
1.3.6 Relevance of the study to research methodology............. 23
1.3.6.1 The inadequacies of official crime data.................... 23
1.3.6.2 Confessions of abuses which had never been reported to the police......................... 23
1.3.6.3 Contribution of a balanced study............................ 24

1.4 LITERATURE SURVEY........................................................ 24

1.5 INTERVIEWS........................................................................ 27

1.6 OBSERVATIONS.................................................................... 27

1.7 CONSULTATION WITH EXPERTS.......................................... 28

1.8 AIMS OF THE STUDY.......................................................... 28

1.9 DEFINITION OF KEY CONCEPTS......................................... 29
1.9.1 Grief............................................................................. 29
1.9.2 Posttraumatic stress disorder........................................ 30
1.9.3 Apartheid...................................................................... 32
1.9.4 The Truth and Reconciliation Commission...................... 33
1.9.5 Human rights............................................................... 34
1.9.6 Political violence.......................................................... 36

2.1 INTRODUCTION
2.1.1 Janoff-Bulman and Frieze's Victim Experience Model
2.1.2 Criticism of Janoff-Bulman and Frieze's Theory
2.1.3 The significance of Janoff-Bulman and Frieze's Model for the present study

2.2 THE BEREAVEMENT THEORY OF STROEBE AND STROEBE
2.2.1 Numbness
2.2.2 Yearning and protest
2.2.3 Despair
2.2.4 Recovery and restitution
2.2.5 Morbid grief reactions
2.2.6 Criticism of Bereavement Theories
2.2.7 The significance of the bereavement theories for this study

2.3 THE SOCIAL SYSTEM AS PART OF PARSONS' GENERAL ACTION SYSTEM
2.3.1 Introduction
2.3.2 The Concept of Action
2.3.3 The General Action System
2.3.4 Subsystems of the General Action System
2.3.5 Functional pre-requisites
2.3.5.1 Adaptation
2.3.5.2 Goal-attainment
2.3.5.3 Integration
2.3.5.4 Latency

2.4 THE SOCIAL SYSTEM AS PART OF PARSONS' GENERAL ACTION SYSTEM AND ADAPTATION, GOAL-ATTAINMENT, INTEGRATION AND LATENCY
2.4.1 Biological subsystem
2.4.2 Personality subsystem
2.4.3 Social subsystem
2.4.4 Cultural subsystem
2.4.5 Criticism of Parsons' General Action Theory
2.4.6 The significance of Parsons' General Action System Theory for this research .................................................................................... 67

2.5 THE EXISTENTIAL THEORY OF FRANKL ......................................................................................................................... 68
2.5.1 Frankl's Auschwitz Experiment ................................................................................................................................. 68
2.5.1.1 Criticism of the Existential Theory ......................................................................................................................... 69
2.5.2 Significance of Frankl's Theory of Existentialism for the present study ........................................................................ 70

2.6 MASLOW'S THEORY ............................................................................................................................................................ 71
2.6.1 Maslow's views on the self-actualising person .................................................................................................................. 72
2.6.1.1 Classical conditioning .................................................................................................................................................. 73
2.6.1.2 Instrumental conditioning ........................................................................................................................................ 73
2.6.1.3 Modelling ................................................................................................................................................................. 74
2.6.2 Critique of Maslow's theory ......................................................................................................................................... 74
2.6.3 Significance of Maslow's theory for the present study ................................................................................................. 75
2.6.4 Conclusion ..................................................................................................................................................................... 75
2.6.5 TRC's Revelations Aftermath Model .......................................................................................................................... 75
2.6.5.1 Janoff-Bulman and Frieze's Model of Victim Experience ......................................................................................... 77
2.6.5.2 Bereavement theories ................................................................................................................................................ 77
2.6.5.3 Parsons' General Action System .............................................................................................................................. 78
2.6.5.4 Existential Theory of Frankl .................................................................................................................................. 78
2.6.5.5 Maslow's Theory of Personal Growth and Motivation ............................................................................................ 79
2.6.6 Conclusion ..................................................................................................................................................................... 79
2.6.7 Research expectations ...................................................................................................................................................... 79
2.6.7.1 Victims who attended hearings of the TRC will believe in personal invulnerability before the impact of the political conflict on them ......................................................................................... 79
2.6.7.2 Victims who testified before the Commission will believe that the world is meaningful ................................................................. 79
2.6.7.3 Victims who attended hearings of the TRC will have a positive view of the self ........................................................................ 79
2.6.7.4 Victims who lost their loved ones during the political conflict of the mid 1980s will suffer from numbness ................. 80
2.6.7.5 Victims whose family members were killed through murder during the apartheid era will experience yearning as they protest against such loss ........................................................................... 80
2.6.7.6 Victims whose loved ones were killed as a result of the political conflict of the apartheid era will suffer from despair ................................................................. 80
2.6.7.7 Victims who lost family members during the political conflict of the apartheid era will experience restitution as they recover from their grief ......................................................................................... 80
2.6.7.8 Victims whose family members disappeared during the apartheid era will suffer symptoms of pathological grief .............................................................................................................................. 80
2.6.7.9 The impact of the revelations of the TRC will have a direct effect on the biological (behavioural) subsystem (adaptation) .............................................................................................................. 80
2.6.7.10 The impact of the revelations at the TRC hearings will have a direct effect on the personality subsystem (goal-attainment) ........................................................................................................ 80
2.6.7.11 The impact of the TRC will have a direct effect on the social subsystem (integration) ................................................................................................................................. 80
2.6.7.12 The effect of the TRC's revelations will have a direct impact on the cultural subsystem (latency) ................................................................................................................................. 80
2.6.7.13 Victims who attended hearings of the TRC will expect to find meaning in their suffering through discovering the truth................................................................. 80

2.6.7.14 Victims who attended hearings of the Commission will expect to be freed from the burden of not having all the information related to the cause of their trauma................................................................................................................................. 81

2.6.7.15 Victims who attended hearings of the TRC in this research will expect to begin the healing process by making submissions to the TRC............................................................................................................................................. 81

2.6.7.16 Victims who attended hearings of the Commission will expect their family members to also begin the healing process after the revelations of the TRC............................................................................................................................................. 81

2.6.7.17 Victims who attended hearings of the TRC will expect that the South African society will be healed by the revelations made to the Commission, as that can promote national unity............................................................................................................................................. 81

2.6.7.18 The parents of children (who display deviant behaviour) will expect them to develop a positive value system............................................................................................................................................. 81

2.6.7.19 Parents of former youth activists (who are still unemployed) will expect them to be engaged in skills training programmes to better their lives............................................................................................................................................. 81

2.6.8 Conclusion............................................................................................................................................................................................................. 81

CHAPTER 3: METHODOLOGY, PROCEDURES AND TECHNIQUES ............................................................................................................................................................................................................. 82

3.1 INTRODUCTION............................................................................................................................................................................................................. 82

3.2 METHODOLOGICAL APPROACH............................................................................................................................................................................................................. 82

3.3 RESEARCH PROCEDURES

3.3.1 Literature study ............................................................................................................................................................................................................. 84

3.3.1.1 Scientific books ............................................................................................................................................................................................................. 85

3.3.1.2 Scientific articles ............................................................................................................................................................................................................. 86

3.3.1.3 Newspaper reports ............................................................................................................................................................................................................. 90

3.3.1.4 Popular articles ............................................................................................................................................................................................................. 91

3.3.2 Documentary studies ............................................................................................................................................................................................................. 93

3.3.3 Audio-visual reports ............................................................................................................................................................................................................. 94

3.4 TECHNIQUES............................................................................................................................................................................................................. 96

3.4.1 Sampling ............................................................................................................................................................................................................. 96

3.4.1.1 Composition of the sample ............................................................................................................................................................................................................. 98

3.4.1.1.1 Sample of TRC Commissioners ............................................................................................................................................................................................................. 98

3.4.1.1.2 Co-ordinators of the TRC offices ............................................................................................................................................................................................................. 99

3.4.1.1.3 Sample of the victims ............................................................................................................................................................................................................. 100

3.4.2 Interviews ............................................................................................................................................................................................................. 103

3.4.3 Interview schedule ............................................................................................................................................................................................................. 105

3.4.3.1 Composition of the interview schedule ............................................................................................................................................................................................................. 105

3.4.3.2 Interviews with the respondents ............................................................................................................................................................................................................. 106

3.4.3.3 The use of the tape recordings ............................................................................................................................................................................................................. 107

3.4.3.4 Probing ............................................................................................................................................................................................................. 108

3.4.4 Scientific validity and reliability of the study ............................................................................................................................................................................................................. 109

3.4.5 Observation ............................................................................................................................................................................................................. 110

3.4.6 Case analysis ............................................................................................................................................................................................................. 111
3.4.7 Pilot Study
3.4.7.1 Problems experienced during the pilot study

3.5 TECHNIQUES USED TO ANALYSE DATA

3.6 RATIONALE FOR ACCEPTING OR REJECTING RESEARCH EXPECTATIONS

3.7 PROFILE OF THE RESEARCH GROUP
3.7.1 Commissioners
3.7.1.1 Age group of the Commissioners
3.7.1.2 Race of the Commissioners
3.7.1.3 Gender of the Commissioners
3.7.2 Victim respondents
3.7.2.1 Age group of the victim respondents
3.7.2.2 Profile of victim respondents
3.7.2.3 Employment status of victim respondents
3.7.2.4 Educational qualifications of the victim respondents
3.7.2.5 Victim respondents’ marital status

3.8 CONCLUSION

CHAPTER 4: ANALYSIS AND INTERPRETATION OF DATA

4.1 INTRODUCTION

4.2 THE COMMISSIONERS
4.2.1 Biographical information (see paragraph 3.9.1)
4.2.2 Information about the victims’ experience of bereavement
4.2.3 Information on the search for the meaning of suffering through the revelations
4.2.4 Information about the introduction of a new value system

4.3 THE CO-ORDINATORS

4.4 THE VICTIMS
4.4.1 Janoff-Bulman and Frieze’s victim experience model
4.4.2 Bereavement Theories
4.4.2.1 Victim respondents’ experience of pathological grief
4.4.3 Parsons’ General Action Theory
4.4.3.1 Victim’s experience of the revelations of the TRC in terms of adaptation (biological subsystem)
4.4.3.2 Victims’ experience of the revelations of the TRC in terms of goal attainment (personality subsystem)
4.4.3.3 The impact of the revelations of the TRC on the victim respondents in terms of the social subsystem (integration)
4.4.3.4 Victim respondents’ experience of the TRC process in terms of the cultural subsystem
4.4.3.5 Victims’ experience in terms of The Existential Theory of Frankl
4.4.4 Victims' perception of behavioural change in terms of Maslows' Theory of Personal Growth

4.5 CONCLUSION

CHAPTER 5: CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

5.1 INTRODUCTION

5.2 CONCLUSIONS
5.2.1 Conclusions in connection with the aims of this investigation

5.3 RECOMMENDATIONS
5.3.1 Healing and rehabilitation
5.3.1.1 Support services
5.3.1.2 Non-Government Organisations
5.3.1.3 Reintegration and rehabilitation
5.3.1.4 Lustration
5.3.1.5 Popular publications
5.3.1.6 Promotion of a human rights culture
5.3.2 Reparations
5.3.3 Recommendations for further research

5.4 CONCLUSION

REFERENCES

APPENDIX A

APPENDIX B

APPENDIX C
TABLES

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Table</th>
<th>Description</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>3.1</td>
<td>Age Distribution of Victim Respondents</td>
<td>121</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.1</td>
<td>Victims' Experience of Political Conflict</td>
<td>136</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.2</td>
<td>Impact of Bereavement on the Victim Respondents</td>
<td>141</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.3</td>
<td>Victim Respondents' Adaptation to the Biological Effect</td>
<td>145</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.4</td>
<td>Victim Respondents' Personality Manifestations</td>
<td>148</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.5</td>
<td>Victim Respondents' Experience of the Social Subsystem</td>
<td>151</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.6</td>
<td>Victim Respondents' Experience of the Cultural Subsystem</td>
<td>154</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.7</td>
<td>Age Distribution of Victims</td>
<td>158</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.8</td>
<td>The search for the meaning of suffering through the revelations</td>
<td>160</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.9</td>
<td>Victim Respondents' Perceptions of the Behaviour of the Youth</td>
<td>163</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
FIGURES

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Figure</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>3.1 Age group of the Commissioners</td>
<td>118</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.2 Race of the Commissioners</td>
<td>119</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.3 The Gender Distribution of the Commissioners</td>
<td>120</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.4 Race of Victim Respondents</td>
<td>122</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.5 Employment status of Victim Respondents</td>
<td>123</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.6 Educational Qualifications of the Victim Respondents</td>
<td>124</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.7 Victim Respondents marital status</td>
<td>125</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
This study focused on the impact of the revelations at the Truth and Reconciliation Commission (TRC) hearings on 30 female victims of all races. An explanatory model, the TRC Revelation Aftermath Model was designed to direct the research and to interpret the data. Researcher made use of a non-probability sampling strategy. Five respondents were selected by purposive sampling and 25 were selected by means of the snowball sampling. The sample of this study consisted of three components, namely ten Commissioners of the TRC, ten Co-ordinators who worked in the TRC offices, as well as 30 female victims of all races. The Commissioners were interviewed to validate the data obtained from the victims while the Co-ordinators were consulted merely to obtain general information on the criteria which was used to process the applications submitted by the victims in order to receive the reparations.

The analysis of the data revealed that the respondents accepted three assumptions, namely, they were invulnerable with regard to trauma such as that caused by the revelations of the TRC. In addition to this they viewed life as meaningful and that they also had a positive attitude towards it before the political conflict of the apartheid era in South Africa impacted on them. These assumptions were interpreted in terms of Janoff-
Bulman and Frieze's theory. The research findings indicated that the assumptions were not only affected by the revelations but that they also influenced the way in which these women experienced the TRC process.

It was found that the victim respondents, whose family members had disappeared and were never confirmed dead, had suffered exacerbated emotions which were characterised by denial. This was the result of repressed memories associated with the grief. Of importance too, was the finding that a few of the victims were successful in deriving meaning from their suffering, while others, who could not achieve this, could not reconcile with their perpetrators and this was determined by their age. As the former were willing to forgive their perpetrators they had thus found inner peace.

During the interviews, the victims mentioned that although the TRC had appeared to be necessary before they made their submissions, however, after it had disappointed them by not granting them reparations, this exacerbated their suffering as they felt that they had been discriminated against in favour of the perpetrators who were granted amnesty irrespective of not having made full disclosures. According to Parsons General Action System all the respondents experienced their trauma as biological entities, and thus suffered symptoms related to psychosomatic illnesses such as, inter alia, headaches, insomnia, and ulcers. These were accompanied by personality characteristics such as anger, aggression, as well as hatred. As the victims could not function in isolation, they also endured ostracisation related to cultural stereotypes and in this way, their suffering was perceived as secondary to that of males. Furthermore, within the social system, the victims who perceived the TRC as biased, believed that it had caused the country embarrassment by bringing up the conflict of the apartheid era. However, others verbalised that the Commission was a good initiative for South Africa so that peace as well as reconciliation could be facilitated for the sake of unity. It is crucial to stress the finding that some of the respondents, although few, who had been granted reparations, were satisfied with the TRC and perceived it as fair and thus could reconcile with their perpetrators. The research report concludes with a number of recommendations for the establishment of support services for the traumatised victims as well as integrative mechanisms, which could encourage co-operation between the citizens of South Africa so that the reconciliation which the TRC facilitated can be sustained.

KEY TERMS

The Truth and Reconciliation Commission, amnesty, violence, human rights, reconciliation, apartheid, trauma, grief, bereavement.
Hierdie navorsing let op die uitwerking van die onthullings vir die Waarheids- en Versoeningskommissie (WVK) op 30 vroulike slagoffers van alle rasse. ’n Verduidelikende model, die WVK Onthullings-nawerkingsmodel (vgl. Figuur 2.1), was ontwerp om die navorsing te rig en die data te interpreteer. Die navorser het gebruik gemaak van ’n strategie vir nie-waarskynlikheidsmonsterneming. Vyf respondente was geselekteer deur gerigte monsteronderzoek en 25 deur middel van sneeubal-monsterneming. Die monster van hierdie studie bestaan uit drie komponente, naamlik tien Kommissarisse van die WVK, tien Ko-ordineerders werksaam in die WVK-kantore, asook 30 vroulike slagoffers van alle rasse. Onderhoude was gevoer met die Kommissarisse om die data, verkry van die slagoffers, te bekrachtig, terwyl die Ko-ordineerders genader was om algemene inligting te bekom rakende die kriteria wat gebruik was om die slagoffers se aansoeke vir genoegdoening te verwerk.

Die analise van die data het aan die lig gebring dat die respondentes drie aannames aanvaar het, te wete dat hulle onkwesbaar is aangaande trauma soos navore gekom het in die onthullings voor die WVK, dat die lewe sinnol is en dat hulle ’n positiewe instelling daarteenoor gehad het voordat die politieke konflikt van die apartheidstydperk in Suid-Afrika op hulle geïmpakteer het. Hierdie aannames is geïnterpreteer ooreenkomstig die teorie van Janoff-Bulman en Frieze. Die navorsingsbevindinge toon aan dat die aannames nie net geraak was deur die onthullings nie, maar dat dit ook die wyse waarop hierdie vrouens die WVK-proses ondervind het, beïnvloed het.

Daar is vasgestel dat die slagoffer-respondente, van wie familie-lede verdwyn het sonder dat sodanige persone se dood ooit bevestig was, se emosionele lyding vererger was, welke lyding gekenmerk was deur ontkennings. Hierdie was die gevolg van onderdrukte herinneringe gekoppel aan hul smart. Van belang is dat enkele van die slagoffers daarin geslaag het om sin uit hul lyding te verkry, terwyl ander vir wie dit nie beskore was nie, hul nie met die daders kon versoene nie en dit was die gevolg van hulle ouderdom. Aangesien die eersgenoemdes bereid was om die daders te vergewe, het hulle innerlike vrede ondervind.

Gedurende die onderhoude het die slagoffers genoem dat die WVK vir hulle belangrik gelyk het voordat daardie slagoffers hul betoë voorgelê het, maar toe die WVK nie aan hul versoene vir genoegdoening gevolg gegee het nie, is hulle lyding vererger want hulle het gevoel dat hulle uitgebuit word ten voordele van die daders wat amnestie verkry het afgesien daarvan of hulle volle onthullings gedoen het of nie. Volgens Parsons se General Action System het al die respondentes hul trauma as biologiese wesens ondervind en daarom aan simptome gely wat verband hou met psigosomatiske siektes soos byvoorbeeld hoofpyn, slaaploosheid en maagsure. Laasgenoemde het gepaard gegaan met persoonlikheidsreaksies soos woede, aggressie asook haat. Aangesien die slagoffers nie op hul eie kon funksioneer nie, was hulle ook sosiaal uitgeskuif as gevolg van kulturele stereotipes en hierdeur was hul lyding gesien as ondergeskik aan dié van mans. Voorts, binne die sosiale sisteem, sien die slagoffers die WVK as bevooroordeeld en glo dat dit die land benadeel het deur die konflik as gevolg van apartheid in die kalklig te plaas. Daar was egter ander wat die mening gehuldig het dat die Kommissie 'n goeie inisiatief vir Suid-Afrika was sodat vrede en versoening gefasiliteer kan word met die oog op eenheid. Dit is noodsaklik om daarop te wys dat enkele van die respondentes, wat genoegdoening ontvang het, tevrede was met die WVK